Constantinople, January 15. The 7th Instant, a little after Midnight, a Turkish Man of War of 64 Guns, lying at Anchor in the Harbour near Topana, ready to sail with another of the same Force for the Archipelago, was set on Fire by a Pan of Coals being put in a Room by some of the People to warm them, who fell asleep. The Fire had made such a Progress while they slept, that the People, despairing to extinguish it, and fearing it should be communicated to the other Ship, cut the Cables. The Wind, blowing fresh, drove her to a Key called Capani, where she set Fire to five Saicks, (large Vessels that trade to the Black-Sea) two of which were laden with Corn. They were all pushed off from the Shore, and separated in the Harbour. One of them immediately set Fire to three other Saicks, which lay at another Key: Two of them were drove to a Place called Giubali, and set Fire to the Houses on the Constantinople Side of the Harbour, eighty of which were entirely consumed. Several of the Vessels went along Shore on this Side, and set Fire to a Kiosk of the Grand Signior's, which was soon reduced to Ashes. Had it not been for the Dexterity of the Slaves of the Bagnio, who sunk one of the Vessels while she was on Fire, and driving near to eighteen large Men of War, which lay moored together before the Arsenal, the whole of them must inevitably have been consumed.

The Grand Signior, the Grand Vizir, and all the great Officers of the Porte, were upon the Water giving their Orders. The human Mind cannot picture to itself a more striking and horrid Scene, than to see, at the same Time, nine large floating Fires, in the Middle of the Night, with two great Fires on each Side of the Water, which threatened Destruction to the whole City.

The Grand Signior, who is blessed with an Heart of Charity and Benevolence, has given Orders to make up the Losses of the unhappy Sufferers by Water.

The same Night a Sultana was delivered of a Prince, which was made known on Saturday by the Firing of the Cannon from the Seraglio and the Arsenal, which continued Morning, Noon,

Noon, and Evening; and there are great Rejoicings in the Seraglio.

The Engliſh Ambaſſador ſent the uſual Compliments to the Reis Effendi upon this Occaſion. On the 12th the Envoy of Naples gave a great Dinner to all the Foreign Miniſters, it being the Birth-day of the King of the Two Sicilies.

Bruſſels, February 10. Yeſterday M. Morant ſet out for Paris: Upon taking Leave of the Court his Royal Highneſs the Prince made him a Preſent of a very beautiful Snuff-Box, with his Picture ſet in Diamonds: In the Snuff-Box was an Order for 500 Louis d'Ors. Madame Royale gave him a Watch ſet with Diamonds, and 300 Louis d'Ors.

On Wedneſday laſt M. de Van Haren, the Dutch Miniſter Plenipotentiary at this Court, had the Misfortune to fall down in the Room, and broke his Thigh Bone; as the Fracture is an exceeding bad one, it is imagined that he he will be lame all his Life.

Hamburgh, February 17. Laſt Week, in a full Aſſembly of the Burghers, they agreed to add to the Salary of each Senator, 500 Marks annually.

Hague, February 20. Count Degenfeldt ſat out for Vienna this Morning, as Envoy Extraordinary to that Court.
